Notes on Selected Portions of Today’s Music

The Processional Hymn and Postlude:

The tune Dix originally appeared in Stimmen aus dem Reiche Gottes ... herausgegeben von Conrad Kocher, Stuttgart 1838, where it was set to the chorale Treuer Heiland, wir sind hier. W. H. Monk transcribed the melody and shortened it for use with the Epiphany hymn As with gladness men of old [#52] in 1861, and it subsequently became very popular. Unfortunately Dix disapproved of the tune, saying ‘I dislike it, but now nothing will displace it’. Conrad Kocher (1786–1872) studied in Rome and later founded a School of Sacred Song in Stuttgart. He was organist of the Stiftkirche in Stuttgart (1827–1865) and published many chorales. William Henry Monk (1823–1889) held organist positions at several London churches. He is best known as the first musical editor of Hymns Ancient & Modern. In 1874 he was appointed Professor of Music at King’s College, London.

William H. Harris’s (1883–1973) Epilogue on “Dix” pays homage to this now famous tune. Considered to be one of the great men of English Cathedral music in the 1930s, 40s, and 50s, Harris directed the music at New College Oxford, and Christ Church Cathedral before finishing at St. George’s Windsor.

The Sermon Hymn:

Each of the participants involved with Christ’s birth – Mary and Joseph, the inn keeper, the angels, shepherds, and wise men – has much to teach us.

Although there is no scriptural basis for stating dogmatically that there were three wise men, the fact that three distinct gifts are mentioned has given rise to this traditional idea. Master artists throughout the centuries have depicted three wise men on camels as one of their favorite nativity themes.

The number of wise men is not important, but the fact that they persisted in following the light that was given them until they found the object of their search, that they responded in worship, and that they returned home to share their experience with others all has much to tell us. Also, the gifts presented to the Christ child were both significant and appropriate: gold, symbolic of His kingly reign; frankincense, symbolic of His priestly ministry; myrrh, symbolic of our redemption through His death. How important it is that our gifts of love and devotion be offered to Christ after we have first found Him and then have bowed in true adoration before Him.

The author and composer of this well-known Christmas hymn was an Episcopalian minister from Pennsylvania. John H. Hopkins, Jr. (1820–91) has been credited with contributing much to the development of music in his denomination during the nineteenth century, writing a number of fine hymns and hymn tunes. One of his publications, Carols, Hymns and Songs, enjoyed four editions.
